Commissioners of the CUSTOMS, to the Right honourable The Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury; on the subject of the Trade with India.—29 October 1812.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS.

MR. Harrison having, by his letter of the 28th of July last, transmitted to us copies of certain Queries, and several other Papers received by your Lordships from the President of the Board of Controul, upon the subject of the Trade with India, and at the same time signified that he had received your Lordships commands to call for our serious and early consideration of that important subject, and to direct us to communicate to your Lordships our opinion and observations upon the several Queries and Points suggested by the Earl of Buckinghamshire:

IN obedience to your Lordships commands so signified,

WE REPORT

That deeming the subject referred to us as involving points of much importance, we have given the several matters to which they relate the most attentive consideration.

We beg leave to premise, that we do not consider ourselves warranted to enter into the question, or to offer any opinion on the policy of allowing any portion of the Trade now carried on under the sanction of the East India Contant to and from the Port of London exclusively, to be extended to any other of the Ports of England, but deem ourselves confined to a consideration of the subject only with a view to the effect which such extension might have on the Revenue under our management, and how far it might be endangered by such a measure, in case it should be adopted by Parliament.

We shall now proceed to offer our opinion and observations on each of the Questions referred to us, in the order in which they stand in the Paper transmitted.

Question, 1.—HAS the Board of Customs reason to suspect that Smuggling of Teas, or of East India goods, has taken place to any considerable extent, in the course of the last five years: If so, in what ports or places has it existed, and in what manner has it been carried on?

Observation.—WE have reason to know that such Smuggling has taken place in the course of the last five years, but we cannot take upon ourselves to state the particular Ports where such frauds have prevailed; the same we apprehend may have occurred, as opportunities presented, at various places between the ships entrance of the Channel and the final delivery of the cargo in the Thames, and have been carried on by means of boats from the shore, and small cutters and other vessels sent out for the purpose.

Qu. 2.—What Seizures of such goods have been made in each year, and where?

We beg leave here to refer to the Accounts of such Seizures in London and the Out-Ports of England, which it was our intention to annex to this Report; but as the same cannot be completed in less than a fortnight from this time, and your Lordships having signified your wish to receive our Report with the least possible delay, we have not deemed it fit to delay the transmission thereof, but will forward the *Accounts as soon as they can be finished.

Qu. 3.

^{*} These Accounts accompany the Report of the Board of Customs of 26 December 1812, and are inserted subsequently, at pp. 14, &c.

Qu. 3.—In the event of the Import Trade from India and the China seas being opened to the Out-Ports, would the danger of Smuggling be increased, and in what degree?

If this Trade should be allowed to be opened to the Out-Ports generally, 'we have no doubt that the danger of Smuggling would be increased, and that in a great degree.

> Qu. 4.—How far might such danger be increased by the restoration of peace?

It appears to us that the danger would be increased in the event of the restoration of peace, from the arrival of vessels singly and at uncertain times; from a reduction of the number of vessels employed by the Admiralty; and from the opportunity afforded, by the ships not being under convoy, for delaying their passage up the Channel for the purpose of Smuggling.

> Qu. 5.—Can any measures be devised to prevent such danger; and what are those measures?

The consideration of the most effectual means of preventing Smuggling constantly engages the attention of the Board; and the numerous alterations in the Revenue Laws, which have taken place within these few years, in consequence of our suggestions, with the various regulations proposed by us, and sanctioned by your Lordships, do not afford us the means of offering any thing new on the subject; but with reference to the East India Trade, we would recommend an extension of the operation of the Manifest Act, 26 Geo. III. chap. 40. by subjecting goods not specified in the Manifest to forfeiture, prior to the report of the cargo by the master; a measure which, we are of opinion, will afford some additional security to the Revenue.

> Qu. 6.—To which of the Out-Ports could such Trade be opened with the greatest security to the Revenue, and under what regulations; and would it be advisable to restrict the tonnage of ships trading to the East Indies and the China seas?

We are of opinion, that the security of the Revenue would require, that the number of Ports, to which the East India Trade might be extended, should be limited to the following; namely, Bristol, Liverpool, and Hull. We select these Ports, from the circumstance of their already possessing Wet Docks; and the regulations for the security of the goods might be in a great measure rendered conformable to those already established in the Port of London, as soon as proper and secure warehouses are provided; we would recommend that no vessel be permitted to trade to India of less burthen than four hundred tons.

> Qu. 7.—Can the warehousing of East India goods be permitted in any of the Out-Ports, and which, with safety to the Revenue; and what articles can be so warehoused in each port, and under what regulations?

Considering this Question as relating only to the safe custody of the goods, we have no doubt but that warehouses might be found or built at each of the Ports we have before mentioned, sufficiently secure for that purpose, and of course equally applicable to any article which might be brought from the East Indies, and under the regulations now established in London,

> Qu. 8.—Can the ad valorem Duty on certain East India goods be secured in the Out-Ports, and under what regulations; or must it be commuted for a rated Duty? If so, what should such Duty be on each article?

We consider this Question as of the first importance; and we have no difficulty in submitting to your Lordships our decided opinion, that the Duty on those articles imported from India or China, and on which the whole Duties are now ascertained, according to the value or sale price, cannot be collected at any Out-Port, without incurring the risk of a great defalcation of Revenue. The open and public manner in which those goods are now exposed to sale by the East India Company, by preventing combination amongst the buyers, and from the quantity and value of goods so offered for sale encouraging purchasers from the Continent, together with the various accounts of the price at which each lot may be sold, kept as well by the Officers of the Customs and Excise where that Revenue

No. 1.7 TRADE WITH THE EAST INDIES AND CHINA.

Revenue is concerned, as by those of the Company, afford to the Revenue that degree of security, arising from those several circumstances, which we apprehend could not be obtained at any Out-Port. With respect to commuting the Duty now charged on any article according to the value, for a rated Duty, we feel it our duty to state, that such an alteration would, in our opinion, be highly dangerous to the Revenue.

Qu. 9.—Would any and what additional establishment of Officers be necessary in any of the above cases; and what would be the additional expense of such establishment?

In the event of extending the East India Trade to any of the Out-Ports, some increase of expense will unavoidably be incurred; but, supposing such extension to be confined to the Ports we have mentioned, we are not aware that the additional charge would be such as to offer any material objection to the measure. When it shall have been determined whether any and what alteration shall take place with respect to the Trade in question, and to what extent as to the ports, we shall be enabled more particularly to state to your Lordships, how far our present land and water guard will afford, by a proper arrangement of each, and possibly some small addition to the latter department, sufficient security to the Revenue, and what increase of expense would be thereby occasioned.

Having thus obeyed your Lordships directions, and reported on the several Questions referred to us, we have only to add our assurances, that whatever measures Parliament may think fit to adopt with respect to the Trade from India or China, we will use our utmost endeavours to establish such additional Regulations and Restrictions as may appear necessary for the better security of the Revenue entrusted to our management.

REPORT, to the Right honourable The Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury, of the Commissioners of Customs; relative to the Trade with the East Indies and China;—dated 26 December 1812:—Together with an Appendix of Accounts (No. 1. to No. 12.) therein referred to.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS,

MR. Harrison, one of your Lordship's secretaries, having, by his letter of the 9th November last, signified that he was commanded to direct us to reconsider our Report of the 29th of the preceding month, with reference to the Trade between Great Britain and China being exclusively confined to the East India Company, while the Trade to and from India, with the exception of Tea, was opened either generally, or to the Ports specified (viz. Liverpool, Bristol, and Hull), and report whether such an alteration of circumstances would change our view of any of the points stated in our answers to the Queries referred to us in his letter of the 28th July last, and particularly in what degree the danger of Smuggling would, in our apprehension, be increased, by extending the Homeward-bound Trade from India (the Trade from China and the whole Tea Trade being, as now, reserved to the Company) to any of the Out-Ports; and whether we could suggest the means of providing against such danger in the case supposed, better than in the event of a general opening of the Trade to all parts of Asia; and also to state what articles, the produce of India and China, are subject to ad valorem Duties, and to which of them the difficulty of substituting rated Duties will more particularly apply; and that we are also to communicate our opinion as to the manner in which the Duties on Tea, and the Company's exclusive Trade therein could, in that case, be most effectually protected; and generally state any observations which may occur with respect to the security of the Revenue under the circumstances above mentioned.

85. B And

And Mr. Harrison having, by his subsequent letter of the 20th of November, signified that he had received your Lordships commands to return us our Report on the subject of the Trade with India, and to desire we will re-consider the same, and make a further Report to your Lordships; incorporating therein our former Report, and also our answers and observations upon the Queries contained in the letter from Mr. Harrison of the 28th July last to us, and also answers and observations upon the six additional Questions specified in his said letter of the 20th November;

Upon consideration of the directions contained in the letter from Mr. Harrison, last received, it appears to us that the most apposite and perspicuous mode of obeying your Lordships commands, will be, in the first place, to introduce a copy of our former Report on this subject; then proceed to submit our opinion and observations separately, on the several points mentioned in the letter of the 9th of November, and also upon the six additional Questions specified in the letter of the 20th of that month, according to the order in which they stand referred to us; and to conclude our Report, conformably with your Lordships order expressed in the first of those letters, with such general observations and suggestions as have occurred to us with respect to the security of the Revenue under the circumstances therein adverted to.

Our former Report, bearing date the 29th of October 1812, was as follows:

Custom House, 2 (Signed) "R. Frewin. J. Hume. F. F. Luttrell. J. Willis."

WE proceed to state our opinion on the points mentioned in Mr. Harrison's letter of the 9th of November.

THE first matter referred, if we understand the same correctly, is, whether if the present Trade of the East India Company between Great Britain and China, and the Imports from thence of Tea and other articles, either the growth, produce, or manufacture of that country, or hitherto imported from thence, was, as heretofore, confined to the Company, whilst the Trade to and from India, exclusive of the China Trade thus defined, was opened generally or to the Ports specified, namely, Liverpool, Bristol, and Hull, our view of any of the points stated in our Answer to the Queries referred to in Mr. Harrison's letter of the 28th July last, would thereby be changed, and particularly in what degree the danger of Smuggling, under the reserved China Trade to the Company, would in our apprehension be increased, by extending the homeward-bound Trade to any of the Out Ports; and whether we could suggest the means of providing against such danger in the case proposed, better than in the event of a general opening of the Trade to all parts of Asia.

We are of opinion, that this modified and reduced opening of the Trade would be less pregnant with the apprehended danger to Revenue, than the more extended extended and unqualified one; inasmuch as Tea is an article subject to very high Duties, of very general demand and consumption, well adapted to, and one principal subject of Smuggling; and that by adhering to the existent system of exclusive importation thereof to the Port of London, as well as the other articles now imported from China, a more effectual security and guard against illegal acts, in respect thereof, must prevail, than in the event of the general or partial opening in discussion.

The annexed Account shows generally the respective articles which have hitherto constituted this Import China Trade.

Account (No. 1.) page 14, &c.

We see no ground under the contemplated distinction, to alter the opinion we have given as to the general danger of the increase of Smuggling, consequent to opening the East India Trade to the Out-Ports, farther than that the proposed exclusion of the China Trade therefrom would contract the danger touching the articles therein comprehended.

Touching that part of your Lordships reference, whereby we are directed to state the articles, the produce of India and China, which are subject to ad valorem Duties, and to which the difficulty of substituting rated Duties will more particularly apply, we beg to refer to the Account annexed.

Account (No. 2.)

The articles, the produce of India and China, which are subject to ad valorem Duties, are therein enumerated; and those to which the difficulty of a substitution of rated Duties would more especially apply, are specified in a distinct List at the close thereof.

The leading principle of such difficulty rests upon the great diversity in the nature, quality, and value of the articles in the various forms thereof, and the great extent of their manufacture, though of one general description, and ranging under a common denomination.

The best practical mode, with a view to the substitution in question, respecting articles thus circumstanced, would be to take the several values according to what had been the Sale prices at different periods, and thence to form an average rate of Duty. The effect of such a measure, would, we apprehend, be materially prejudicial to Revenue and Trade.

The articles of the higher quality and price under the operation thereof, would be admitted at a Duty inferior to what is raised by the present mode of ascertaining the same; and the inferior articles of the same sort would be loaded with a Duty they could not sustain, and their Importation be greatly reduced, or in some instances altogether checked.

In exemplification of what we have observed touching the inaptitude of rated Duties, in lieu of the ad valorem ones at present attaching to certain articles, for the reasons assigned, we annex an Account shewing the Sale prices of such articles, for three years ending the 5th of July 1812.

Account (No. 3.) page 29, &c.

Touching the third object of your Lordships reference, we are not at present prepared to offer an ultimate opinion, that any new provisions or regulations could be devised, more effectually to protect the Company's exclusive trade in Tea, than those resorted to.

That adverting to the provisions by different Statutes, and some recent ones, and of extensive operation, in order to guard against the Smuggling of Tea, or improper practices in relation of Tea, we are not aware of any immediate measure which could better protect the Duties on Tea, or the Company's exclusive Trade in the article.

We have no general observations to submit touching the security of the Revenue under the circumstances, other than those which will occur in the other parts of this Report.

We next proceed to offer our opinion and observations upon the several Questions contained in Mr. Harrison's letter of the 20th of November.

Query, 1st.—Supposing the amount of Trade and the number of ships from the East Indies, &c. to be the same, would there be more of less danger of Smuggling, if the Trade was confined to the Port of London.

Digitized by Google

London, or if it was distributed between the Port of London and the Out-Ports?

[No. 2.

O scrvatlon.—We think the danger of Smuggling would be greater under the case supposed, if the East India Trade was distributed between London and the Out-Ports, than if it was confined to the Port of London, inasmuch as the proportion of that Trade, transferred to the Out-Ports, would expose the Revenue to the risks we apprehend, and have before stated, respecting the general question of the confined Trade to London, or a participated one between London and the Out-Ports.

2d.—Supposing the extension of the Trade to the Out-Ports to lead to a general increase of the Trade, or to an addition to the number of Ships, would such increase of Trade and addition of Ships afford the prospect of an increase of Smuggling beyond the proportion of such increase of Trade?

The question appears to be of difficulty and intricacy, and as proper to be contemplated in two views; first, in the event of a general increase of Trade and Ships, from the cause alluded to, the danger of Smuggling must be materially affected by the nature and description of the articles constituting such increase, and the portion thereof carried on at the Out-Ports. Second, in the event of an increased number of vessels to carry on such Trade, the danger connected always with the above consideration, and in our apprehension, augmenting with the number and comparative small tonnage of the vessels employed, would essentially depend upon their size, description, draught of water, and various local and other circumstances, and also the portion thereof forming the Out-Port Trade.

It consequently appears to us impracticable to give any definite or well-grounded answer to the question thus viewed, touching the relative quantum of increased Smuggling, but a matter rather of conjecture, we think it would be likely to increase beyond such proportion. Apart, however, from this consideration, and confining our views, as we do in every part of what we offer, strictly to the concerns of Revenue, we apprehend injury thereto might eventually arise, although an increase of Trade and Navigation should accompany the proportionate greater prevalence of Smuggling.

The home consumption demand for the articles imported, and the Duties thence accruing, might not augment with the increased Trade and Navigation; and the greater quantity of articles illicitly thence introduced into the United Kingdom, would be prejudicial to Revenue, by defalcation of Duty, and to the Trade and Manufacture of the country, by the bringing prohibited articles to rival or supplant our own manufactures.

3d. Could any regulations be adopted with a view to the examination of ships at St. Helena, or in any other possession of His Majesty, which would be likely materially to check the practice of Smuggling, when the Trade arrived in the Ports of the United Kingdom?

No such examination could, we think, take place to real effect, without disturbing the cargo, and inducing inconvenience and delay, possibly detrimental to the homeward voyage.

There are at present no establishments or officers under our management, either at St. Helena or the Cape of Good Hope, nor are there any in India.

We are not aware under what system of regulations the articles are shipped in India by the Company.

It is, we think, highly material that the Manifest required by the Act of 27 Geo. III. ch. 32. and now transmitted, should be rendered as complete and correct as possible, in order that such document should comprehend and specify all the Packages, Goods, and articles on board, whether belonging to the Company, the Officers, or Passengers, under forfeiture, and heavy penalties on the commander in failure thereof.—That one authenticated copy of this instrument should be transmitted direct to the Board, and one should accompany the vessel, subject to the inspection of any of our officers who may visit and examine her.—Some regulated and digested system to this effect, in concert with the East India Company, as far as requisite, would, with the application and enforcement of the Manifest Law in the mode suggested in our former Report, we think, be essentially beneficial and operative to the prevention of illicit practices.

These are the best practical regulations which hitherto occur to us in relation to this object of inquiry.

> Query 4th.—Is there any security against Smuggling in Ports having Wet Docks which are not surrounded with walls, which does not apply to Ports without Wet Docks?

Observation.—None, at all events we think that can be estimated as material, and we are doubtful of any. We deem it right to add, that the preponderating opinion of our officers, in departments which best qualify them to judge, is, that Ports thus circumstanced afford less security against Smuggling.

The great danger of the species of Smuggling had in consideration, we regard to be an antecedent stage, and to take place mostly upon the near approach to the Channel, pending the transit along the coast, the navigation up the River, and the unshipment of the Company's and the Private Trade in cases where, from peculiar causes, the same takes place previous to the ultimate discharge at the Port.

> 5th.—Have you any reason to believe that there has been any considerable amount of Smuggling in East India and China goods in American ships, or through America?

We have reason to think there has been Smuggling of this sort, but have no data to form any founded opinion touching the extent.

The Account of Seizures annexed, where those made from American vessels are distinguished as far as means were afforded, tends to throw light upon this page 31, &c. point.

Account

Instances of Outward Smuggling, by relanding articles from American vessels, have occurred, and a trial has recently taken place, and conviction for that offence ensued.

> 6th.—Upon the return of peace, would there be more danger of Smuggling East India and China goods in British ships from the East Indies, than in American ships, or through the Americans?

This must depend upon various circumstances and contingencies: among others, the number, size, and description of American vessels frequenting the Ports of this Country, the admitted intercourse of such ships with India and China, and the regulations adopted in those Ports touching their freights and cargoes. We therefore deem ourselves incompetent to form any prospective judgment upon the question.

The general system ultimately adopted touching the India Trade, whether confined, as at present, or laid open; in what mode and to what extent, would affect that part of the question which regards British ships.

The opinion of the practical officers in London and the Out-Ports, who have been consulted upon this point, affords no information uniform in nature, or leading to conclusive result.

It appears to us fit, in this part of our Report, to submit the following remark to your Lordships:

Among various regulations and measures adopted by us to prevent illegal practices on the arrival of ships from India, one has recently been resorted to, which, we have grounds to think, has been attended with much good effect; namely, the obtaining the earliest intelligence of the arrival or expected arrival of East India fleets upon the coasts of this kingdom, and dispatching, with the utmost promptitude, a sufficient number of superior and inferior officers to meet and board the ships on their arrival in the Downs, (to which place, according to our general system, they are guarded by cruizers in our service) and to guard and protect Revenue from fraudulent proceedings whilst remaining there, and during the transit from thence to the River, and until the entry of the vessel in the East India Dock. A system of watch and precaution, which we do not think could so aptly take effect at the Out-Ports, different in circumstances and situations, under a trade divided and dispersed, and where our official establishments are less strong, not under our immediate superintendence, and where equal energy and active operation could not well be expected.

Hitherto, under the matters referred, our attention has been principally directed to the danger to Revenue touching the East India Trade, which would arise from illicit proceedings in the course of importation; another and important view, in which we think it behaves us to regard the subject, as connected with a different but material species of risk to Revenue, presents itself; we allude to the fraudulent relanding and introduction into the kingdom of East India articles, entered and shipped for exportation. All the articles prohibited to be used or worn in this kingdom must fall, of necessity, within this Outward Trade; and the article of Tea, subject to high Importation Duties, and some others, which form a part thereof, either in their original or manufactured state, draw back the whole or portion of those Duties on being exported, the Warehousing Duty on the articles subject thereto being in all cases retained, except to Ireland; or these articles are exported direct from the warehouses, without ever having paid the Home Consumption Duties, and their re-introduction clandestinely into the United Kingdom becomes of consequence alike injurious.

The detriment to Revenue, to our Trade and Manufactures, accruing from such fraudulent and pernicious practices, are great and obvious. The prevention of, and guard against them, have been the object of various enactments and official regulations.

The peculiar circumstances of Europe have of late years rendered it necessary or expedient to relax in or depart from some of those Provisions and Regulations, and from some material in their nature, especially in the reduced Tonnage of the exporting vessel. The Certificates of Landing from Ports on the Continent, to which the articles exported heretofore required, in order to clear the Bonds given, have also, from like causes, been in many instances unattainable, and thence dispensed with. These circumstances and considerations, thus shortly tonched upon, appear to us to afford additional and forcible reasons for considering whether or not the extension of the East India Trade to the Out-Ports, under either of the propositions, generally or partially, would be pregnant with increased danger to Revenue of the kind in question.

Should any part of the East India Trade be extended to the Ont-Ports, we may, we think, assume, that the articles admitted inwards at those Ports, would be so, upon the principle, that those not prohibited in this country should be taken out from the warehouses for the sole purpose of home consumption or for exportation, and those prohibited for exportation only; and that no intermediate transit or conveyance from Port to Port would be allowed.

It is proper to remark, that prohibited articles, wanted for peculiar branches of commerce or uses, in our own Settlements, Plantations or Territories, and for Africa, are now permitted to be sent from London to certain Out-Ports, for the purpose of exportation thereto; and it has been the practice to allow Spices also to be so removed for general exportation: but these permissions are accompanied with special and various official precautions and regulations, and not admissible by coasting conveyance.

The danger here contemplated, under a general extension of the East India or China Trade to the Out-Ports, would be great; and the extension, as narrowed by the selection of the three Ports named, viz. Bristol, Liverpool, and Hull, we cannot but regard as more hazardous for Revenue, than in the present confinement of the Import and Export Trade to London.

Should the East India Trade generally, or under modification, be extended to the Out-Ports, the openings for the illicit traffic and malpractices alluded to, and the comparative danger thence to be apprehended, must depend upon various local and other circumstances appurtenant to such Ports; the geographical situation, the aptitude for such proceedings, the more or less facility or delay in the outward navigation, at different seasons, and throughout the year; and their contiguity to or more easy means of surreptitiously conveying the articles into Great Britain or Ireland, or the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man,

No. 2.] TRADE WITH THE EAST INDIES AND CHINA. 13 Man, as a depôt for future running into the United Kingdom when occasion offered.

We do not deem it necessary to pursue this view of the subject farther; but we have thought it our bounden duty to submit to your Lordships every matter within the strict purview of our department, which appears to us of weight, touching a subject of this moment, and involving a Revenue of so great magnitude.

Subordinate regulations have suggested themselves to us, but which we forbear from entering into, as being of detail; and, at all events, not proper to be discussed, until the great primary question touching the Trade has been decided.

The Accounts Nos. 1. to 12. according to the List annexed, are transmitted either in pursuance of your Lordships directions, or in elucidation of the subject-matter under discussion.

N. B.—The above ACCOUNT exhibits a complete view of all East India Goods exported during the above-mentioned period, with the exception of a few small articles of Drugs, &c. which have been blended in the books of this office with articles of a similar nature of the growth or production of other countries. No particular Account of the quantity of East India Goods exported upon drawback having been kept in the official books, such Goods as are included with the amount of the respective articles exported from the warehouses.

REPORT of Commissioners of Customs, Scotland, to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury;—on the subject of the Trade with India.—8 September 1812.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS,

R. Harrison having, with his letter of the 28th July last, transmitted to us Customs, certain Queries, and Copies of Papers, from the Board of Controul, upon the subject of the Trade with India, and directed us, after having given the same our serious and early consideration, to communicate to your Lordships our opinion and observations thereon; - we now proceed to answer these Queries, so far as the information we have obtained, and our own knowledge of the subject will enable us, the necessary references to the Ports having prevented us from making an earlier communication to your Lordships.

Scotland.

Question 1.—HAS the Board of Customs reason to suspect, that Smuggling of Tea, or of East India Goods, has taken place to any considerable extent, in the course of the last five years? If so, in what ports or places has it existed, and in what manner has it been carried on?

Answer.—THERE has been very little Smuggling of Tea or other East India Goods within the last five years.—The ports at which such Smuggling has taken place, will appear from the enclosed Account of Seizures.—It has been chiefly carried on by means of vessels from America and the Baltic. We do not consider this question as relating to East India Goods smuggled into England, and afterwards introduced into Scotland; the quantity of which, there is reason to conclude, has of late years been very inconsiderable > Qu. 2.—What Scizures of such Goods have been made in each year, and where?

The Account above mentioned will show the description of Goods, the amount, and the places at which such Seizures were made.

> Qu. 3.—In the event of the Import Trade from India and the China Seas, being opened to the Out-ports, would the danger of Smuggling be increased, and in what degree?

The danger of Smuggling would be materially increased, if the Trade was extended to this country, as there is not, at present, the opportunity of carrying on this traffic by vessels direct from India; and the degree of increase may be taken in a proportion not less than that in which Smuggling is now carried on in England by ships by the East India Trade: indeed a strong probability appears to us of the proportion being greater, in consequence of a more considerable extent of coast, and less risk of detection; the cruizers being fewer on the Scotch than on the English coast, and without the benefit of convenient harbours for safe anchorage.

> Qu. 4.—How far might such danger be increased by the restoration of peace?

Such danger would doubtless be increased by the restoration of peace, as greater facility would be given to it, from the reduction of the Navy, and the number of persons who would be thrown out of employment; and as the inhabitants along the coast have from time immemorial been in the practice of Smuggling, they would naturally return to this favourite pursuit, when aided by men well acquainted with the creeks and inlets of this country. At the same time, as it is presumed, that Admiralty cruizers would be continued in the service, not only as a nursery for British seamen and a protection to the coast, but also to prevent illicit trade, we are inclined to think that Smuggling would not be successful to the extent experienced in former times, under the existing laws, and the regulations hereafter proposed.

> Qu. 5.—Can any measures be devised to prevent such danger, and what' are those measures?

A very strict enforcement of the Manifest Act, and special regulations relative to the sort and size of packages, will be necessary. When ships are laden 85. D d

Customs,-Scotland. laden at ports in India where there are no public officers by whom the Manifest may be authenticated, the master may be obliged, in the course of his voyage homeward, to touch at some port at which such officers are established, and to verify his Manifest before them, the Manifest to be attested (as to its having been so verified) by such officers under their hands. Ships from India should be closely watched from their first appearance on the coast of the kingdom; and the first English or Scotch cruizers falling in with such ship, directed to accompany her until relieved by another cruizer, and the last cruizer to deliver her into the charge of the proper officers at her port of destination.

As, however, such ships might not be met with by any cruizer, means should be adopted to place officers upon her, on her appearance in either of the Firth of Forth, or Firth of Clyde, and therefore it would be necessary to station a limited number of men at convenient and proper places under a superintending officer; such officer to be called to an account, should any ship from India pass without being boarded: and to enable him to ascertain her description, every ship trading to this country from India, might be compelled to hoist a distinguishing flag or signal, night and day.

The cruizers of this revenue are, three on the East, and at present, four on the West coast: their attention would of course be directed to the service in question; but in order to strengthen the waterguard without additional expense, two or three of the cruizers in the service of the Excise might be transferred to the Customs:—in truth, the whole waterguard should be entrusted to the care and direction of the Board of Customs; the Navigation Laws and the various Regulations relating to shipping being under their superintendence. By such system the guard would be rendered more efficient, the cutters of both Revenues being now frequently in port together, and upon all occasions of joint service, jealousics uniformly exist.

> Qu. 6.—To which of the Out-ports would such trade be opened, with the greatest security to the Revenue, and under what Regulations; and would it be advisable to restrict the Tonnage of ships trading to the East Indies and the China Seas?

We are of opinion that the trade should be confined to the ports of Port Glasgow, Greenock, and Leith; and that any vessel importing the produce of India should be subject to forfeiture, if of less burthen than three hundred and fifty tons per register.

> Qu. 7.—Can the warehousing of East India Goods be permitted in any of the Out-ports, and which, with safety to the Revenue; and what articles can be so warehoused in each port, and under what Regulations?

The Ports mentioned, are those at which the importation of tobacco and snuff is confined, in Scotland, and where the warehousing of East India Goods may be permitted with safety, the warehouses being substantial and secure, and a sufficient number might be rendered fit for the reception of such goods as would be required, but the precise description of goods we are at a loss to particularize; tea, we conceive, would be the chief article of consumption, and callicoes and other piece goods for the foreign market. The regulations, it is presumed, may continue such as are now in force, so far as we are acquainted with them; but information must be procured from the officers in the Port of London, relative to the mode of warehousing East India Goods there, before we report our opinion on this point.

> Qu. 8.—Can the ad valorem Duty on certain East India Goods, be secured in the Out-ports; or must it be commuted for a rated Duty? If so, what should such Duty be on each article?

We find great difficulty in answering this query, from having neither experience nor information in this country to assist us. It is however presumed, that Duties ad valorem would be very unequally received, as partial sales and other causes might operate so as to prevent the receipt of Duties on the fair value; we therefore are in favour of rated Duties, which we apprehend might be arranged by a minute enquiry into the value of East India articles, and an investigation of the catalogues on which the sales have been marked; but without information, and which is to be obtained only in London, we feel ourselves incompetent to state the sum for which the ad valorem Duties should be commuted.

Qu. 9.—

Qu. 9.—Would any, and what additional Establishment of Officers be necessary, in any of the above cases; and what would be the additional expense of such Establishment?

Customs,— Scotland.

An addition to the number of Officers would be required: but it is impossible to estimate the number or the expense of such Establishment, which must necessarily depend on the extent of the trade: if it should be confined to a ship or two at each Port, the requisite addition to the Establishment would not be very great, although there can be no doubt that an increased commerce, and that of such a nature as requires every degree of vigilance, would demand an increase to the waterguard proportioned to the shipping employed, and particularly at the Ports in Scotland, where the number of tidesmen and officers in the subordinate departments, is at present barely sufficient for the duty at this time required of them.

Register of Seizures.

Commissioners of EXCISE, London; in reply to a Letter from this Board, transmitting one from Mr. Bruce, with some Queries sent from the Board of Controul;—on the subject of the Trade with India.

To the Right Houourable the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS,

Commissioners, Excise, YOUR Lordships having been pleased, by Mr. Harrison's Letter of the 28thultimo, to send us Copies of a Letter from Mr. Bruce, with certain Queries transmitted by direction of the Board of Controul, on the subject of the Trade with India; and having directed us to take the same into our early and serious consideration, and to state our opinion and observations thereupon;—

We beg leave to acquaint your Lordships, that we are collecting materials and making preparations with all diligence for duly fulfilling your Lordships commands; but we fear we shall not be able, without some short delay, to report satisfactorily upon a matter of so great magnitude and importance.

We are your Lordships

Most obedient and most humble servants,

REPORT from the Commissioners of Excise, London; on the Trade to India and China;—with an Account of Seizures.

To the Right honourable the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS,

YOUR Lordships having, by Mr. Harrison's Letter of 28th July, transmitted unto us the annexed Copy of one from Mr. Bruce, with certain Questions by the President of the Board of Controul of the Affairs of India, respecting the Irade with that country; and having directed us to take this important subject into serious consideration, and to communicate our opinion and observations upon the several queries and suggestions of the Earl of Buckinghamshire;—

We failed not immediately to institute such enquiries, and collect such information from various persons, and parts of the kingdom, as might furnish us with materials for making a proper return to your Lordships order, in a matter of so much moment; and having given our closest attention to the whole, we proceed to report, in the best manner we are able, upon the several points, in the order in which they are proposed.

In answer to the first question, we have to state, that we find considerable quantities of Teas have been smuggled from the East India Company's ships; within the last five years, although upon comparison with the quantities brought legally into consumption, the proportion may not be great. Silk Handkerchiefs and other India Goods are also clandestinely run on shore as often as opportunities can be found, and these practices have been carried on less or more from the entrance of the Channel to the arrival of the ships in the river Thames. This is effected through the Channel, chiefly by piloting and fishing vessels, or by boats rowed by eight, ten, or twelve oars, or even by six-oared boats, of such slight scantling, and so constructed, as to outrow or outsail the boats of the Revenue. Such light boats throw the Goods overboard, if in danger of capture, and and this has also been done by the China and India ships themselves in the Downs and river Thames, when the owners of packages not entered on the ship's papers, despair of running them safely on shore.—Numerous such packages have been taken up by the officers, and loose tea has been found floating on the surface of the water, when the packages have either been broken by accident, or staved designedly. Within the river Thames, various other means are found of landing goods from the Company's ships, of which many officers and others do not fail to avail themselves, whenever it is supposed it may be done without detection.

In the Second place, we transmit a particular Account of the Seizures of Ships, the produce of China and India, made by our officers in each of the last five years; begging leave only to observe, that we conceive no correct estimate of the extent of Smuggling can be formed from the number or amount of Seizures.

Thirdly, If the Home Trade from India and the Chinese Seas, were laid open to the Out-ports, the danger of Smuggling might not improbably be increased, especially if it were allowed in ships of all sizes, and not confined to particular places. It is impossible to say to what degree it might reach, as this would depend upon a variety of circumstances, which might augment or controul the danger, or lessen, or even take it entirely away.

But it does not appear (Fourthly) that such danger would be materially enhanced in the event of peace, so far as regards the direct Trade with China and India. It would then become a consideration of great importance to guard against Smuggling from the continent of Europe.

On the Fifth head, we have to observe, that although the very high Duties on Tea and other articles, encourage the illicit trader to exert himself to the utmost, in his attempts to defraud the Revenue, yet the late Acts for the better prevention of Smuggling in general, have perceptibly had a very great and good effect. A diligent application of these to Chinese and Indian commodities, would be requisite, with a due observance of the Manifest Act in particular. Much also might be done by prohibiting the touching at any Port but that of delivery, except through stress of weather, or the lying at anchor unnecessarily, or before entering the Port, or the hovering on the coast; and by adding to the penalties for breaking bulk, or putting out goods fraudulently. All deposit of Teas or India Goods in the small Islands, or other places from which they may be smuggled into the United Kingdom, should be as far as possible prevented. It would be a valuable regulation to lock down the hatches of all ships employed in this trade, on their arrival, as is done generally in the Port of Bristol, and in some cases, in this Port; and it has been suggested, that the commanders, exclusively of the general responsibility they incur, might be obliged to give special bond against fraudulent practices, either in respect of Exports carried out, or Imports brought into the kingdom. We need not mention the refusal of Licenses to the boats so successfully employed, as we have before stated, in bringing goods on shore from vessels arriving from India and China, and of any addition of men to the pilot boats beyond the legal number.—In fine, we are decidedly of opinion, that it would be essential to limit the size of the ships, and confine the Trade to certain of the Out-ports only.

We are thus led to the Sixth Question,—to which of the Out-ports such Trade might be opened with the greatest safety to the Revenue.—These of course should be such only as can admit of ships of the burthen that may be prescribed, which ought not, we conceive, to be less than 400 or 500 tons, and such as afford the best opportunities for the prevention of Smuggling, and for securing the respective commodities when landed, and particularly where there are proper docks, warehouses and other similar accommodations, to be surveyed and approved, and licensed in the same manner as under the general Warehousing Act. In the part of the kingdom for which we act, we think we cannot safely name more than Liverpool, Bristol, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Dover, and Hull; the other Out-ports appearing to us, for various reasons, insufficient.

As in the term "East India Goods," Tea is understood not to be included, and as the other exciseable commodities imported by the East India Company's shipping, are only coffee and spirits, with Madeira wine carried out to improve its 85.

E e quality,

Commissioners, Excise. quality, and are, in comparison with Tea, very trifling, and may already be ware-housed at the licensed Out-ports. The Seventh Question will apply, we presume, only to the Revenue of Customs.

The Eighth point, of advalorem Duties in this Revenue, regards Tea only, which, as the prices differ widely, we submit, appears to us to be more equitably charged in that mode than at any specific rate, which it would be very difficult to fix with propriety, and with justice to the Revenue. It might be supposed that by collusion and combinations of interested persons, the value upon which the Duty would be taken at the Out-ports might be deteriorated, and thus the Revenue might suffer; but independently of other considerations, it may be remarked that the traders in the capital would probably keep up the price, by employing agents to bid at the Out-ports, or go down themselves for that purpose; and, upon the whole, we do not see that any serious injury in this respect is to be apprehended.

With regard to the establishment of additional Officers, which is the Ninth and last head, as far as we are able at present to judge, it does not appear that many would be wanted; and on the other hand, some of the Officers in the Port of London probably might be spared.

It is not expected, we presume, that we should enter into any consideration of the Policy of the measure, or the commercial parts of the subject, could we venture to undertake to give an opinion upon the same. We may be permitted, however, to add, that anxious for the correctness of the Manifests of Tea, which are documents of the first importance, we have endeavoured to learn by whom they could be authenticated, in case the Trade to China should be laid open. At present, this business lies with the Company's chief Supracargo; but we are informed from good authority, that there would be no obstacle to stationing a British Consul or other officer at Canton, who might examine and attest and transmit Manifests or Inventories of the Goods shipped there, in the same manner as by law or practice it is now done in relation to Goods brought from the West India Islands, or British Plantations in America.

REPORT from the Commissioners of Excise, London, on a Letter from Mr. Bruce; with certain Questions by the President of the Board of Control of the Affairs of India, respecting the Trade with that Country.—7th January 1813.

To the Right honourable the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS,

Commissioners, Excise. YOUR Lordships having, by Mr. Harrison's letter of 28th July, transmitted to us a copy of one from Mr. Bruce, with certain Questions by the President of the Board of Controul of the Affairs of India, respecting the Trade with that country; and having directed us to take this important subject into serious consideration, and to communicate our opinion upon the several Queries and Suggestions contained in those Papers; and your Lordships having also sent us additional Queries by Mr. Wharton's letter of the 13th, and Mr. Harrison's of the 20th of November;—

We have instituted such enquiries and endeavoured to collect such information as might furnish us with materials to make a proper Return to your Lordships order, in a matter of so much moment; and having given our closest attention to the whole, we proceed to report upon the several points, in the order in which they are proposed.

First, we have to state, that we find considerable quantities of Tea have been smuggled from the East India Company's ships within the last five years, although upon comparison with the quantities brought legally into consumption, the proportion may not be great. Silk handkerchiefs and other India goods are also clandestinely run on shore as often as opportunities can be found, and these practices have been carried on, less or more, during the passage, from the entrance of the channel to the arrival of the ships in the docks. It is effected throughout the channel by piloting and fishing vessels, or by boats rowed by eight, ten or twelve oars, or even by six-oared boats, of such slight scantling, and so constructed as to outrow or outsail the boats of the Revenue: such slight boats thrown the goods overboard if in danger of capture, and recourse has been had to the same expedient by the China and India ships themselves, in the Downs and river Thames, when the owners of packages, not entered upon the ships papers, despair of landing them safely; numerous such packages have been taken up by the Officers of the Revenue, and loose tea has been found floating on the surface of the water, when the chests have either been broken by accident, or staved de-Within the river Thames, various other means are found of landing signedly. goods, of which many of the Company's officers and others do not fail to avail themselves, whenever it is supposed it may be done without detection.

2d, Enclosed is transmitted a particular Account of the Seizure of Goods, the produce of India and China, which have been made by our officers in each of the last five years; but we beg leave to observe, that we conceive no correct estimate of the extent of Smuggling can be found from the number or amount of seizures.

3d, If the Import Trade from India and the Chinese seas were laid open to the Out-ports, the number of ships employed continuing the same, the danger of Smuggling might not improbably be increased. It is impossible to say to what degree it might reach, as this would depend upon a variety of circumstances which might augment or controll such danger, or lessen or even take it entirely away. Should the extension of the Trade to the Out-ports lead to a general increase of it, and to an addition to the number of ships, either by such increase, or by the employment of smaller vessels, it cannot be doubted but the facilities for Smuggling would be accordingly multiplied, and in the latter case of employing ships of less tonnage, this would exceed the proportion of the increase of the Trade.

We find no reason to believe that any Smuggling of moment, in Indian or Chinese commodities, has taken place in American ships or through America. But it has been stated to us, that large quantities of Tea have been carried clandestinely by vessels from America into the West India Islands; and it may justly be apprehended that if the commerce to the continent of Europe were open, the American Trade might lessen the exports of such commodities from this kingdom.

4th, In the event of peace, it does not appear that the danger of Smuggling would be materially enhanced, so far as regards the direct trade with China or India in British

Excise.

British vessels; but great opportunities would be given for those of America to Commissioners introduce Teas and other articles privately; and by the ships of both countries such goods might be lodged in places of deposit on the continent, or in the islands, for smuggling in small craft into this kingdom.

5th, With regard to the means of prevention, we have to observe, that although the very high Duties on Tea and other articles, encourage the illicit trader to exert himself to the utmost in his attempts to defraud the Revenue, yet the late Acts for the better prevention of Smuggling in general, have perceptibly had a very great and good effect, a diligent application of these to Chinese and Indian commodities, would be a requisite, with a due observance of the Manifest Act in particular.

Much also might be done by prohibiting the touching at any Port but that of delivery, except through stress of weather, and preventing the hovering on the -coast, or lying at anchor in any place unnecessarily, especially upon approaching, or immediately before entering the Port of discharge; and by adding to the penalty for breaking bulk or putting out goods fraudulently.

All deposits of Teas or India Goods in the small islands or other places from which they may be smuggled into the United Kingdom, should as far as possible be prevented.

It would, we are of opinion, be a valuable regulation to lock down the hatches, at the same time duly securing the bulk-heads of all ships employed in this Trade upon their arrival, as is done generally in the Port of Bristol, and in some cases in this Port.

And it has been suggested, that the commanders of the ships trading to China and the East Indies, exclusively of the general responsibility they incur, might be compelled to give special bond against fraudulent practices, either in respect of Exports taken out, or Imports brought into the kingdom.

The boats also, which, as we have before stated, are so successfully employed in bringing goods on shore, ought by no means to be licensed for any purpose whatever, nor the pilot boats permitted to take any addition of men beyond the legal number.

And in fine, we are decidedly of opinion, that it would be essential to limit the size of the ships, and confine the Trade to certain of the Out-ports only, and in the passage to these, it would be necessary to guard the vessels by Revenue cruizers, for which purpose an increase of the establishment of this species of service would be requisite.

We do not see that any Regulations could be adopted at St. Helena, or any other intermediate possession of His Majesty, by way of precaution against the Smuggling into this kingdom, or for the discovery of the fraudulent practices of the persons concerned in such transactions, as nothing effective could be done without unloading the ships for the examination of the cargo, and this would not be practicable, without extreme detriment to the Trade, at any intermediate port.

6th, The Out-ports to which the Trade might be opened with the greatest safety to the Revenue, would of course be such only as can admit ships of a prescribed burthen, which we think ought not to be less than 400 or 500 tons, and such as afford the best opportunities for the prevention of the running of goods privately before the vessels are cleared, and for securing the commodities when landed, and particularly where there are proper docks, warehouses, and other similar accommodations, and in the approach to which, there are the fewest opportunities for clandestine practices; internally those which have wet docks without walls, we conceive do not furnish greater security than those that have not wet docks. The only complete protection is by docks with surrounding walls of at least twenty feet high; the ports most eligible in the part of the United Kingdom immediately under our cognizance, would at the most be Liverpool, Bristol, Plymouth, Portsmouth, Dover and Hull, the other Out-ports appearing to us, for various reasons, insufficient.

At present, the East India Company's ships have the range of the whole coast of the channel, and both sides of the river Thames; but when they reach Blackwall, are secured within a very sufficient boundary fence, which is not the case in any of the Out-ports.

The entrance into Liverpool from the West, is not of great length, and for the most part is open, but nothing can be better calculated for smuggling, notwithstanding the care of Tidesmen on shipboard, and the vigilance of a nightly Watch, than the docks at this Port, open on all sides, and surrounded by shops, ware-houses, public houses, and other buildings. We are informed, however, that improvements are making, by which one dock will be completely enclosed by a boundary 85.

Commissioners, Excise. boundary wall, as in the Port of London, and this only would be fit for the reception of East India ships.

The passage up the Bristot Channel furnishes great opportunities for landing goods claudestinely, especially for the last twenty miles; and in consequence of the late alterations, the shipping lies afloat in the midst of the city, without any other security than the locking of the hatchways and other communications with the cargo.

Into Plymouth, Portsmouth, and Dover, ships enter immediately from the sea, and the passage is shorter than to London; but the security is also by locks only and Tidesmen.

The run to Hull from the Channel, may perhaps be reckoned equivalent to the navigation up the river Thames; and no ships from the East Indies should be permitted to pass round the North of Scotland. There is great danger of smuggling within the Humber; at the same time it is stated to us, that some intentions have been intimated of constructing better and safer accommodations than the present open dock there.

We have spoken more particularly of Imports, but it will be seen that there is the like danger of the Revenue's suffering on the exportation of goods upon drawback, except that outward bound ships may proceed to sea with greater expedition than those can enter which arrive from foreign parts.

We would only add, on this head, that it would be requisite each Port, before approved, should be very diligently surveyed, and the necessary accommodations and securities pointed out by persons peculiarly acquainted with such matters, as well as Revenue Officers.

All the Ports we have mentioned are licensed for the reception of goods under the general Warehousing Act, to which Tea might be added. The other exciseable articles brought by the East India Company's shipping are only Coffee and Spirits, with Madeira Wine taken out for its improvement, and these in no great quantities.

8th.—The ad valorem Duties in this Revenue attach only on Tea, which, as the prices differ widely, we submit seems to us to be more equitably charged in that mode than could be done at any specific rate, and it would be very difficult to fix any rated Duty on it, with propriety and justice to the Revenue. It has been supposed that by collusions and combinations of interested persons, the value upon which the Duties would be taken at the Out-ports might be deteriorated, and thus the Revenue might fuffer; but independently of other considerations, it may be remarked, that the traders in the capital would probably keep up the price by employing Agents to bid at the Out-ports, or go down themselves for that purpose; and upon the whole, we do not see that any serious injury in this respect is to be apprehended, whilst an allowance for draft, now made by the East India Company, would, we are induced to hope, be discontinued, whereby the Revenue, it has been calculated, would, upon the present scale of importation, profit nearly f. 90,000 per annum.

importation, profit nearly £. 90,000 per annum.

As to the establishment of additional officers, as far as we are able at present to judge, it does not appear that many would be wanted, and on the other hand, some of the officers in the Port of London probably might be spared.

By Mr. Wharton's before-mentioned letter of the 13th November, we are directed to advert to the case of continuing the Trade to China in the hands of the East India Company, and adjoining the Out-ports for the other parts of their commerce. If so, your Lordships will perceive, from our statement of the exciseable articles imported by the Company's shipping, that this revenue would be a very little affected. The Tea Trade is that in which we are most materially concerned, and auxious for the correctness of those documents upon which the principal check depends, which we conceive to be the Manifests, we have endeavoured to learn, whether in case the trade with China should be laid open, they could be attested by any person there, in the room of the Company's chief Supercargo, with whom that business now lies; and we are informed from good authority, that there would be no obstacle to stationing a British Consul at Canton, who might examine and certify, and transmit Manifests or Inventories of the goods shipped there, in the same manner as by law or practice is now done in relation to goods brought from the West India Islands or British Plantations in America.

We are, Your Lordships

Most obedient and most humble Servants,

Excise Office, London, 7th January 1813.

Commissioners of EXCISE, London; relating to classing Dover with Plymouth and Portsmouth amongst Out-ports to which India Trade might be extended.—11th March 1813.

To the Right honourable the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS,

Commissioners, Excise.

YOUR Lordships having been pleased, by Mr. Harrison's letter of the 25th ultimo, adverting to our Report respecting the Trade to India, to direct us to state our reasons for classing Dover with Plymouth and Portsmouth amongst the Outports to which that Trade might be extended;

We have to observe, that having mentioned Dover merely as one of the very few places at the most, where the India Trade might be allowed; afterwards, in detailing the circumstances which distinguish the places so mentioned, we speke of the aforesaid three Ports, your Lordships will perceive, as similar, in their being immediately accessible from the sea, and situate at a much shorter distance from the entrance of the Channel than London, or the more northerly Ports.

None of those mentioned by us, have the internal accommodations and security we had represented to be desirable for the protection of the Revenue; but from the Reports made to us, it appeared that an enclosed dock might be constructed at Dover, and vessels of four or five hundred tons burthen be admitted into the At the same time it is necessary to remark, that it is a dry harbour, and has a bar, offering a daily obstruction, and occasionally ships are prevented for several days from entering, and are obliged to bear away for the Downs.

We are your Lordships

Commissioners of EXCISE, North Britain; on the subject of the Trade with India. - 8th Sept. 1812.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIPS,

IN obedience to Mr. Harrison's letter of the 28th July, directing us to communicate to your Lordships our opinion and observations upon the several questions and points suggested by the Earl of Buckinghamshire; we take leave to report as follows, upon these Queries, taking them in the order in which they are submitted.

> Question 1.—HAS the Board reason to suspect that the Smuggling of Tea or of East India Goods, has taken place to any considerable extent in the course of the last five years? If so, in what ports or places has it existed, and in what manner has it been carried on?

Qu. 2.—What Seizures of such Goods have been made in each year, and where?

WE have no reason to suspect that the Smuggling of Tea or of East India Goods has taken place to any considerable extent in the course of the last five years; so far as the enquiry refers to Scotland, and comes under the cognizance of this Board, the whole amount appears upon investigation, not to have exceeded Commissioners, 328lbs. of Black Tea, at the periods and in the quantities hereunder stated.

Qu. 3.—In the event of the Import Trade from India and the China Seas being opened to the Out-ports, would the danger of Smuggling be increased, and in what degree?

It appears unquestionable, that the danger of Smuggling would be very considerably increased, because the facility of Smuggling must inevitably be very much augmented:—to what degree it would increase, it is not at all possible to ascertain,—it is a question which experience only can decide; the amount of Duty on the particular article; its capability of being compressed into small bulk, so as to be transportable with sufficient privacy; the extent of demand for it; the local advantages which may be afforded for evading the Duty: all these circumstances taken together, will be the degree in which Smuggling may be expected to increase.

Qu. 4.—How far might such danger be increased by the restoration of peace?

The presumption is, that it would be increased in proportion as the restoration of peace supplied greater excitement and more extensive opportunity.

Qu. 5.—Can any measures be devised to prevent such danger, and what are those measures?

No measures can be devised that will prevent the danger; measures may be applied to the evil itself, when it arrives, but whether they will be adequate or not, it is impossible to predict. It must be first seen what modes of fraud or evasion are resorted to, before the means of check or prevention can even be suggested; the measure to be applied must depend upon the nature of the evasion to be detected, or of the fraud to be provided against, and must consequently wait the arrival of the circumstances out of which they are to arise.

Qu. 6.—To which of the Out-ports could such Trade be opened, with the greatest security to the Revenue, and under what Regulations; and would it be advisable to restrict the Tonnage of ships trading to the East Indies and to the China Seas?

From their local means of information, this question seems to confine itself more peculiarly to the consideration of the Board of Customs.

Qu. 7.—Can the warehousing of East India Goods be permitted in any of the Out-ports, and which, with safety to the Revenue; and what Articles can be so warehoused in each Port, and under what Regulations?

That the warehousing of East India Goods may be permitted in certain of the Out-ports, and with sufficient safety to the Revenue, we perceive no reason to doubt. We must at the same time beg leave to be considered as answering this question as widely, and with terms of equal latitude in which it is put. We must presume the permission capable of being controlled by sufficient limitations, and of being actually so controlled. The different Out-ports may no doubt, from their peculiar situation, be susceptible of regulations more or less effective: upon this, the Board of Customs, under whom they are placed, can best pronounce. With respect to the latter part of this question, unless the particular articles intended to be warehoused were specified, it is not possible to ascertain under what regulations the warehousing of them should be allowed. Taking the term Articles generally, the warehousing of them would seem to require no other regulations than those of precaution and responsibility, which at present exist in the Warehousing System. But different articles require different degrees of superintendence, different means of preservation, different rules of inspection, different modes and periods of survey; the regulations of course, whatever they may be, must adapt themselves to the kind of articles to which they are meant to These not being enumerated, we have no means of judging whether the G g Warehousing apply. 85.

Commissioners, Excise,

Warehousing System would require to be modified in any other manner for the better protection of the Revenue, or is at present sufficient for that purpose.

Qu. 8.—Can the advalorem Duty on certain East India Goods be secured in the Out-ports, and under what Regulations, or must it be commuted for a rated Duty? If so, what should such Duty be on each Article?

Whether the ad valorem Duty can be secured in the Out-ports, the Board of Customs are best enabled to form a judgment; assuming the fact, that it cannot be secured, and that it may be found expedient to commute it for a rated Duty, we feel ourselves precluded from submitting "what such Duty should be on each article," from the circumstance of the articles not being enumerated, and their present ad valorem Duty distinctly stated. We are without the means of forming any comparative estimate that can enable us to determine the relative value of the respective articles, or to offer any just rates of commutation to the judgment of your Lordships.

Qu. 9.—Would any, and what additional establishment of Officers be necessary, in any of the above cases; and what would be the additional expense of such establishment?

An additional number of Officers would certainly be necessary:—what that number would be, cannot be decided upon, before the circumstances are seen, which may render them necessary; it must depend upon the checks which require to be instituted, and the difficulty of incorporating them with the duties of the already existing Officers.

We have the honour to be, my Lords,

Your Lordships most obedient Servants,

Mr. Peel to Richard Wharton, esquire, enclosing Copy of LETTER from the Secretaries to the Customs and Excise in Dublin; on the subject of the Trade with India and the China Seas.

Dublin Castle, 9th November 1812. Sir,

I TRANSMIT herewith, by the Lord Lieutenant's command, a copy of a Letter Commissioners, received from the Secretary to the Commissioners of Excise, dated 31st August last, in answer to the several Queries and points suggested by the President of the Board of Controul, enclosed in your Letter of the 8th of that month, on the subject of the Trade with India and the China Seas, which you will be pleased to lay before the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury. I am at the same time to acquaint you, that the Board of Customs have been urged to return their Answers on this subject with the least possible delay, and when received, no time shall be lost in forwarding them for their Lordships information.

I am, Sir, your most obedient humble Servant,

P. S. Since writing the above, I have received a Letter from the Secretary to the Commissioners of Customs, dated 7th instant, on the subject in question, a Copy of which I enclose.

Excise.

And Sir Charles Saxton having signified to us, that the said Lord Commissioners of the Treasury having requested that the Commissioners of His Majesty's Revenue in Ireland may take into their early consideration the several Queries and points suggested by the President of the Board of Controul, and communicate their opinion and observations on this important subject; your Grace has been pleased to desire that we should accordingly take the same into our consideration, and lay our Report thereupon before your Grace, to be transmitted for the information of their Lordships.

We beg leave to acquaint your Grace, that immediately on receipt of Sir Charles Saxton's Letter, we took the same into consideration, and issued orders to such of our officers as could best convey information on the different matters referred; that our Report has been unavoidably delayed, from our not having until now obtained all the information and documents which we required, to enable us to consider and answer the several Queries upon this subject.

We now beg leave to submit to your Grace such Answers to the different Questions, as upon the best consideration we have been able to frame, premising, however, that as Ireland has not hitherto enjoyed the advantage of any trade to the East Indies, we cannot express our opinion on these subjects with that confidence which would be derived from experience.

> Question 1.—HAS the Board of Customs reason to suspect that Smuggling of Tea or East India Goods has taken place to any considerable extent in the course of the last five years? If so, in what Ports or Places has it existed, and in what manner has it been carried on?

Answer.—HAVING made the necessary enquiries on this subject, we find that in the Port of Cork it does not appear that any Smuggling of East India Goods has taken place within the last five years, at least to any extent worth mentioning; some small seizures of such articles have been made out of American vessels at that Port, but considerable quantities of Tea have been smuggled during the last five years, on the north-west and west coasts of this kingdom, chiefly in American vessels and from American Ports. In the above period several seizures of Teahave been made on shore, within the district of Londonderry; and also some detections of a similar nature have taken place on board of two or three American vessels, which were detained in consequence. In the course of the present year, two vessels were seized and condemned, partly on account of having Tea and Nankeens on board with the intention to smuggle.

In the Port of Belfast, we have no reason to suspect that Smuggling of Tea or East India Goods has taken place to any considerable extent, in the course of the last five years, or prior to that period; and we have no reason to apprehend that Tea or India Goods have been smuggled on shore in other places to any extent worth noticing.

Qu. 2.—What seizures of goods have been made in each year, and where?

In answer to this Question, we beg leave to refer to the Account of such Seizures hereunto annexed, marked A.

> Qu. 3.—In the event of the Import Trade from India and the China Seas being opened to the Out-ports, would the danger of Smuggling

be increased, and in what degree?

As yet it can hardly be said that any trade with the East Indies has been allowed to Ireland. However, by the 33d George III. cap. 31, a certain portion of trade was granted to the Port of Cork, by permitting a limited extent of shipping and tonnage, to take on board there certain specific articles, the produce of Ireland, to be called for by the Company's ships. But this semblance of Trade was so limited by restrictions, that it was not in any instance carried into effect. To this Question therefore we must give a conjectural answer, as we have not any experience of an India Trade to guide us.

We must admit that in some degree the facility of Smuggling may be increased, if such high duty goods be permitted to be imported into certain of the Outports of this country; but we do not think that the danger (at least of direct Smuggling from the East Indies) will be materially greater, provided the trade be subject to proper regulations, such as are hereinafter stated for your Grace's information, and we ground our opinion on the following considerations.

1st. We

Commissioners, Excise. 1st. We conceive that Smuggling, to any great extent, will not be carried on in Merchant Vessels, because these vessels must have their regular cargoes on board; and if any goods should be clandestinely brought over in them with an intention to smuggle, the profit to be gained by evading the Duty on such goods, could never compensate for the risk of heavy penalties and forfeitures of the vessel, both of which may be incurred by the extension of the Manifest Act in the manner we shall hereinafter recommend, so far as respects vessels to be engaged in the East India Trade.

This proposed guarantee for fair trading, together with the enactments of the Revenue Laws now in force, are strong in proportion to the value of the vessels and cargoes at stake. And as the cargoes from the East Indies and China are of the most valuable description, we believe there need be little apprehension that any Smuggling will be carried on of any great moment from that quarter in regular Merchant Vessels. If Smuggling, therefore, should prevail, it must be in cutters or vessels of small burthen peculiarly fitted for such purpose; and the Ports of India, from their great distance, are not likely to be frequented by vessels of that description, to which the Ports of the United States and of Europe are much more adapted.

2d.—The practice of Smuggling will prevail, ceteris paribus, in proportion to the temptation thereto, occasioned either by a great extra value being given to any article, in consequence of the imposition of heavy Duties, or from the effects of a monopoly, or from both combined; which latter is the case in the present instance. The share which the monopoly of the East India Company has in enhancing the value of Tea, may be readily estimated by comparing the price at which the different descriptions sell (free of duty) at the East India sales, and what the same descriptions sell for (likewise free of duty) in America; and we are informed that by this criterion it will appear, on an average, that the advance in price in this article, on account of the monopoly, amounts to about 90 per cent. We conclude therefore, that opening the India and China Trade will, by destroying the monopoly advance, reduce in proportion the advantage, and consequently the practice of Smuggling.

It is also to be observed, that as the territories in the East Indies lately belonging to the French and Dutch, have been conquered by the British forces, there is not any enemy's port there from whence facilities for Smuggling might be derived; and we may add, that when a legitimate trade is opened to the Merchants of Ireland, they will use more exertions (as it will be their interest) to detect and counteract the Smuggling, which to a certain extent has prevailed by the means of American vessels.

Qu. 4.—How far might such danger be increased by the restoration of peace?

The danger of Smuggling in general would be somewhat increased by the restoration of peace; but we do not apprehend that peace would operate so much on the trade with India as on other branches, irregularities in that trade not being subject in time of war to so frequent check and regulation from His Majesty's cruizers, as the trade with Europe and America.

It cannot be denied that peace, by giving free access to the European and American Ports, would give facility to Smuggling from thence, though in regard to the Ports of India and China, it would have little or no effect; the controul of His Majesty's ships remaining upon the trade from the latter, nearly the same as in time of war.

Qu. 5.—Can any measures be devised to prevent such danger, and what are those measures?

If the officers of the Revenue are active and vigilant, the existing laws, with some modifications and additional regulations, duly carried into effect, would appear to be sufficient to prevent Smuggling. We take it for granted, that the trade with India from and to the Port of Dublin and the Out-ports, will be confined to shipping of the United Kingdom; that such vessels will not be permitted to import from India, until security had been given at home against carrying on any illicit trade, and that regular Manifests of their cargoes of a prescribed form be required.

We suggest as an additional check, that the vessels might be restricted to sail with convoy only in fleets, and at particular seasons of the year, and the officer commanding the King's Ship might be instructed to require duplicates of the Manifests of the vessels in his charge, which he should transmit under cover to the Commissioners of the Revenue immediately on his arrival in Port, and that such Manifests and Copies be perfected and certified by the officers of the British Settlement at or nearest to the place of lading; but in no case nearer home than the Cape of Good Hope; or in case that vessels should not sail with convoy, we should recommend that duplicates of the Manifests be sent by the proper officers, under sealed covers, to be forwarded or delivered, on arrival to the Commissioners, in Great Britain or Ireland, as the case may be; and that the vessel shall not be allowed to invoice unless she shall produce such sealed and authenticated duplicates, in addition to her usual papers.

The suggestions we are induced to offer as worthy of consideration; but we presume that the regulations which it may be thought expedient finally to adopt for the safety of the Revenue and the prevention of Smuggling, will be the same in all the Out-ports of the United Kingdom.

We propose that the penalties of the Manifest Act, with respect to the Trade to India, shall in every case be increased to £. 500, together with the forfeiture of any vessel having East India Goods on board not inserted in the Manifests.

Qu. 6.—To which of the Out-ports could such Trade be opened with the greatest security to the Revenue, and under what Regulations; and would it be advisable to restrict the Tonnage of ships trading to the East Indies and the China Seas?

We can see no objection to the India Trade being extended to the great Ports in Ireland, such as Dublin, Cork, Belfast, Limerick, Waterford and Londonderry; subject to the regulations prescribed by the Warehousing Act, (with certain modifications as hereinafter mentioned in answer to Quere 7.

In regard to the size of the vessels, we conceive that the Merchants who may engage in this trade, will be led for their own advantage to employ as large vessels as circumstances will admit of, and it would be a considerable impediment to the trade, if it were restricted to vessels of very large burthen, as vessels of one hundred and fifty tons are allowed to import tobacco from America, where all East India and China Goods are to be had on comparatively moderate terms, and from whence Smuggling is most easy; it would seem, as long as this remains the case, that little additional security would be derived to the Revenue by fixing on any high standard for the size of vessels to be employed in the India and China Trade; and we think it a material consideration that the trade from this country to China and India will be most intimately connected with that to the Brazils and the river Plata, particularly the latter, which has we believe for some time past been a considerable foreign market for the linen and cotton manufactures of this country, and being in the immediate track, it will be by the sale of our manufactures there, that specie will be procured to proceed with to China. It would therefore be very important that vessels of two hundred tons burthen, which are best suited to the trade of Buenos Ayres, should not be prevented from being employed in the trade to China and India; and we therefore recommend, that so far as Ireland is concerned, two hundred tons should be the standard beneath which vessels should be prohibited from trading to India or the China Seas,

Qu. 7th.—Can the warehousing of East India Goods be permitted in any of the Out-ports, and which, with safety to the Revenue; and what Articles can be warehoused in each Port, and under what Regulations?

The warehousing of East India Goods may be permitted at the Ports prescribed in Ireland, and in the King's Stores, only under the general regulations of the Warehousing Act, which should however, we conceive, be modified with respect to India Goods, by limiting the quantities to be entered for Duty at any one time, to certain lots, and not permitting entries of small parcels, as in the case of other Goods; nor should any issue of India Goods out of store at the Port of importation, be permitted on any account until the Import Duties were first paid.

We think the articles to be warehoused in Ireland, may be the same as shall be permitted, and the regulations be similar to those to be adopted in Great Britain, as nearly as the circumstances of the two countries will admit.

Qu. 8.—Can the ad valorem Duty on certain East India Goods be secured in the Out-ports, and under what Regulations, or must it be commuted for a rated Duty? If so, what should such Duty be on each Article?

With regard to this Question, we feel a difficulty in giving any conclusive Answer to the different points therein contained, not having had any experience whatever Commissioners, Excise, of a direct Trade from India and the China Seas to Ireland. But we presume that in the infancy of such Trade to this country, it might be proper to continue ad valorem Duties upon such articles as are at present admissible into England from the East Indies, upon value, and for the security and collection of such Duties in the different Ports in Ireland, to which we have proposed to extend the East India and China Trade. We beg leave to submit such regulations as have occurred to us (in the present stage of this business) as sufficient for that purpose.

The advalorem Duties, when ascertained after the sale of the different articles, may either be paid down or secured by bond, in like manner as other Duties: on this subject however, a difficulty seems to suggest itself as to the manner of ascertaining the value of such Goods. It would not, in our opinion, be safe to take it on the declaration of the importer. We would therefore submit, that sales be permitted of all such India Goods as shall pay Duty upon the value, whereby the value for Duty may be ascertained in the same manuer as at the Sales of the Company in London; that certain days be appointed (suppose every three months) in each of the Ports for these Sales, by auction at the Custom-house Stores, in presence of and under the inspection of the Collector and Storekeeper. That the Sales shall be so regulated, that no auction of East India Goods at any one Port, shall take place on the same day, or within a fortnight at least of the Sale at an adjacent Port, so that dealers from the interior of the Kingdom may have an opportunity of attending at whatever and as many of the Sales as they shall find it their interest to do; that fourteen days public notice be given of all those Sales, and that the said ad valorem Duty be paid on the amount of such Sales.

The Sales being thus regulated, we cannot but be of opinion that they would probably be as high as they now are in London, making allowance for the fall in price, which the abolition of monopoly would necessarily occasion, but we think would be fully compensated by the increased consumption.

Our reasons for this opinion, we derive from the consideration that Tea is now become a necessary of life, and that the land-carriage is such a moderate percentage on the value, that dealers would attend these Sales from all parts, in such numbers as to render combination or collusion nearly impossible, and to ensure a fair competition.

We beg leave also to suggest, that rated Duties in Ireland should be imposed upon all articles imported directly from the East Indies, which are now rated on importation into England; and we should be inclined to recommend rated Duties upon all articles whatsoever, that can with propriety and safety be so rated, such Duties being more readily collected, and with greater security to the Revenue; and if it should be deemed expedient to substitute rated Duties in lieu of ad valorem Duties, we think that they should be sufficient to meet the present produce of the ad valorem Duties on the quantities now imported, in which case the Revenue would in our opinion be materially benefited by opening the trade, as the quantity consumed and imported would be increased in proportion as the selling price diminished, which would be the natural consequence of doing away the monopoly.

Qu. 9.—Would any, and what additional establishment of Officers be necessary, in any of the above cases; and what would be the additional expense of such establishment?

Some addition to the establishment of Officers may hereafter be necessary, in such of the Ports of Ireland as shall be allowed the benefit of the East India Trade; but it is impossible, at this moment, to form a conjecture of the extent of the establishment that may be required; this must obviously depend on the spirit and enterprize of the Irish merchant in the undertaking.

The present establishment, in our opinion, will suffice at the opening of the trade, and it may be augmented in proportion as an increase of commerce may render it necessary.

The foregoing Answers, Observations and Opinions, we beg leave, with great deference, to submit to your Grace; and have the honour to be, with the highest respect,
